

Lecturer Assistant Mustafa emad Dwood Salem

Department of Law

Criminal Law

Email: Mustafa.emad@alfarabiuc.edu.iq

Education:

MSc, University of Alexandria University, Year 2019/1/19

BSc, University of Alrafidain University College Year 2014/8/5

Profile:

I worked as a lawyer after obtaining a bachelor's degree for three months, after which I completed postgraduate studies at Alexandria University - Egypt - in the field of criminal law. I am currently working on the academic side as an assistant criminal law instructor at Al-Farabi College - the university - and a PhD researcher.

Teaching

1- The origins of criminal investigation and forensic medicine: The criminal investigation deals with the manner of the crime, the method and the reasons for its commission in order to reach the offender, so the investigator takes investigative measures for the purpose of arriving at the truth. As for forensic medicine, it is concerned with studying the autopsy of corpses to find out the natural or criminal act and to know the cases that occur on the corpse after death.

2- General principles in the Penal Code: It includes crime, criminal and penalty, and crime by its nature and gravity. And the criminal in terms of explaining the criminal responsibility of the offender, and the penalty that takes two forms: punishment and precautionary measures.

3- Democracy and human rights: it includes the stage of individuals and the extent to which democracy is consolidated in them, and the extent to which the constitution guarantees human rights, which began in the aftermath of the French Revolution in 1789.

Research Focus

Interest in writing research in the field of law and attending seminars and conferences, the exact specialty, which is criminal law

Publications

A research accepted publication tagged with "the causal link in the killing with abstinence"

Affiliations/Activities

Member of the Iraqi Bar Association since 2015